

Awakening Children to Delightful Living

Your students deserve more than worksheets and watered-down excerpts. Alveary brings real books and genuine knowledge back to the classroom, giving young minds the education they were made for.

RELATIONAL IDEAS

- The classroom honors each student as an active thinker, cultivating connection rather than mere information
- A rich “feast” of subjects and living books introduces students to truth, beauty, and diverse perspectives
- Learning is both intellectual and experiential, connecting ideas to real people, places, and the world around them

THE FORMATION OF THE STUDENT

RELATIONAL METHODS

- Lessons are short and varied, allowing students to give full attention and remain mentally fresh throughout the day
- Narration is central, as students retell, write, or express what they’ve learned, making knowledge personal and active
- Teachers guide rather than lecture, presenting ideas clearly and trusting students to engage, think, and respond

RICH, DETAILED LESSONS

Click or scan to see how relational lessons come to life through the four key parts of a Charlotte Mason lesson: recap, reading, narration, and thoughtful discussion.

“The question is not,—how much does the youth know? when he has finished his education—but how much does he care? and about how many orders of things does he care? In fact, how large is the room in which he finds his feet set? and, therefore, how full is the life he has before him?”
